DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 1/27/03 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Mathurin, Jr., US Patent No. 5,473,144 in view of Ishii, US patent No. 5,768,389.

Mathurin, Jr. discloses a credit card with digitized fingerprint and reading apparatus comprising: a credit card finger print reading apparatus 10 on top of a table 28 exhibiting a credit card 12 containing therein an actual and/or digitized finger print of an authorized credit card holder being scanned by the apparatus 10 whereas the credit card is inserted in the credit card insertion slot 18. The apparatus 10 further exhibiting an access door 14 housing auxiliary power means 32 and a power on/off switch 16. The cardholder places his/her finger on the fingerprint-scanning screen 20 located on the angled front face 30 and the fingerprint is scanned by the finger print scanner 22. If the finger print scanned by the finger print scanner 22 and the finger print scanned on the credit card do not match then the red indicator light 24 illuminates alerting the user that a fraudulent transaction is about to take place. If the green indicating light 26 illuminates, then the user is alerted that the card and card holder are valid (see figures 1-4; col. 14, line 43+).

Mathurin, Jr. fails to disclose or fairly suggests that a "chip card" formatted into a pc card and that the fingerprint sensor comprises an interface coupled with the chip card reader.

Ishii discloses a method and system for generation and management of secret key of public key cryptosystem comprising: a PC chip card 34/200 including personal ID 210 for uniquely identifying the user; a terminal 33; a network 32; and a server 31 (see figure 1, 13 and col. 11, line 20+).

In view of Ishii's teachings, it would have been obvious for an artisan at the time the invention was made to modify the system of Mathurin, Jr. by modifying the reader to read the well-known chip card, PC card and to provide network connection so that users could be verified by cross-referencing the acquired data from the user with the data stored in the card or having a remote database with the identification information therein to identify the users. Such modification would make the system more practical wherein users could be identified even if their information is damage or became unreadable from the card. Furthermore, such modification would allow the system to be configured in a way such that users could use their personal computer to verify and update information in the chip card, which would make the system more effective and more convenient for users to process and execute their credit transactions. Therefore, it would have been an obvious extension as taught by Mathurin.

Re claim 10, the specific connection of the component parts falls within the engineering design choice for providing certain ergonomic design or for minimizing the size of the system, failing to provide any unexpected results. Therefore, it would have been obvious for an ordinary artisan to couple the component parts in such way to achieve any ergonomic design combination.
